I'm using Svn::Repository I can do it by: `svn_repository.commit("parent", ["child1", "child2", "child3"])` But if I have changes in more than one file, I can't do it like: `svn_repository.commit("parent", ["child1", "child2"])` What's the proper way to do this? Thanks Update: I found out that to "commit" an entire directory you need to do `svn_repository.commit("/", [child1, child2, child3])` A: If you do want to commit a set of changes, you'll need to know the directory containing them first. You'll want to do something like the following in a method: `svn_repository.mkdir_p("/path/to/changes") svn_repository.clear_commit_item(1, "path/to/changes") svn_repository.commit("parent", ["child1", "child2"])` In order to commit the contents of a directory you'd want to do something like svn_repository.mkdir_p("/path/to/changes") svn_repository.clear_commit_item(1, "path/to/changes") svn_repository.commit("/", ["child1", "child2", "child3"]) Which is a lot easier to read...
